THE SCENT OF A FLOWER.

The scent of a flower is a word-ful thing!
It plays round the heart like the zephyrs of Spring;
So subtle, so soft, so soulless its power, No monarchy rules like the scent of flower.

Some odors so blend with past happier years They move us like melodies breathing through tears;
For they bring back the faces and forms that are dead.
And walks in the wild woods 'mid sunsets of gold.

A fragrance exhales from a flower that I know, (Dear pledge of a love in the sweet long ago), When tastes were more simple, and purer our pleasures,
And gifts of fresh blossoms were holiest treasures.

One eve, when the dew on the leaves glittered bright,
He prepared the prize with a tender "Good Night,"
And my heart grew faint with ecstatic emotion, For I felt in that flower lay a life long devotion.

He is gone—yet the scent of that delicate flower Still is mine with all the old passionate power;
And oft my sick heart would lie down in despair But that mery divine melts my sorrow in prayer.

'Consider the lilies,' Lord, grant us to be
By the field and the garden brought nearer to Thee.

To read in sweet blossoms Thy goodness and power,
And an infinite love in the scent of a flower.

—Jane C. Simpson.

"HER FACE IS LIKE THE SUNRISE."
Her face is like the sunrise,
Her eyes are like the sea,
And morning comes into my heart If she but look on me.

Her lips are like wild roses;
And when she utterseth Her tender words of love, they bring To me the wild flower's breath.

And so a holy daybreak Is mine with every hour; Each moment feels the blue sea's might,
The rose's magic power.

—George Parsons Lathrop.

TABERNACLE SERMONS.

Discourse by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage.

HISSED OFF THE STAGE.

Men shall clap their hands at him and shall hiss him out of his place.—Job xxvii, 23.

This allusion seems to be dramatic. The Bible more than once makes such allusions. I Paul says "We are made a theatre or spectacle to angels and to men." The theatre is so old that no angel Lear, or Charlotte, or Coriolanus, or Hamlet, or Othello, or Solon, who wrote for it the dithyrambs, live about six or seven hundred years before Christ. It is evident from the text that some of the habits of theatre-goers were known in Job's time, because he described an actor hissed off the stage. The impersonator comes on the boards and, either through lack of study of the part he is to take, or inaptness, or expression of disapprobation and disgust, first by over-appeal, attempting by great clapping of hands to draw out what he says. That failing to stop the performer, the spectators put their tongues against their teeth and make terrible stillation until he disappears behind the curtain.
"Men shall clap their hands at him and shall hiss him out of his place."

My text suggests that each one of us is put on the stage of this world to take some part. Mc-Cullough, the actor, who died recently, was no more certainly appointed on any occasion to appear as Spartacus, or Edwin Forrest as King Lear, or John Kemble as Coriolanus, or Richard as Macbeth, or Cooke as Richard III., or Keam as Othello, than you and I are expected to take some special and particular part in the great drama of human and immortal life. Through what hardship and suffering and discipline these artists went year after year that they might be perfected in their parts, you have often read.
But we, put on the stage of this life to represent charity and faith and humility and selflessness—what little preparation we have made, although we have three galleries of spectators, earth, and heaven and hell. Have we not been more actentive to the part taken by others than to the part taken by ourselves, and while we needed to be looking at home and concentrating on our performances and saying, "That was too high," or "too low" or "too feeble," or "too extravagant," or "too tame" or "too demonstrative," while we were making ourselves a dead failure and preparing to be ignominiously hissed off the stage.
Each one is assigned a place; no superfluities are hanging around the drama of life to take this or that or the other part as he may be called upon. No one can take Coriolanus. We can take no other place. Aye, it is not the impersonation of another, we ourselves are the real Merchant of Venice or the real Shylock; the real final Cordelia or the real cross Legan; the real Portia or the real Lady Macbeth. The tragedian of the playhouse at the close of the third scene of the fifth act takes off the attire of Gonzalo or Edward Mortimer or Henry V., and resigns the character in which for three hours he appeared.
But we never put off our character, and no change of apparel can make us any one else than that which we eternally are.

Many make a failure of their part in the drama of life through dissipation. They have enough intellectual equipment and good address and good family unobscured. But they have a wine closet that outlasts all the forces for their social and business and moral overthrow. So far back as 659 King Edgar of England made a law that the drinking cups should have pins fastened at a certain point in the side so that the indulgent might be reminded to stop before he got to the bottom. But there are no pins projecting from the side of the modern wine cup or beer mug, and the first point at which millions stop is at the gravelly bottom of their own grave. Dr. Sax, of France, has recently discovered something which all drinkers ought to know. He has found out that alcohol, in every shape, whether wine or brandy or beer, contains a parasitic life called bacilli, and that these parasitic life called bacilli, and that By a powerful microscope these living things are discovered, and when you take strong drink you take them into the stomach and then into your blood, and getting into the crimson canals of life, they go into every tissue of your body and your entire organism is taken possession by these noxious infinitesimals. When in delirium tremens a man sees every form of reptilian life it is only these parasites of the brain in exaggerated size. He only sees in the victim is suffering from. He only sees in the room what is actually crawling and rioting in his own brain. Every time you take strong drink you swallow these maggots, and every time the imbiber of alcohol in any shape feels vertigo or dizziness or nausea it is only the jubilant of these maggots. Efforts are being made for the discovery of some germicide that can kill the parasites of alcoholism, but the only thing that will ever extirpate them is abstinence from alcohol and total abstinence, to which I would before God swear all these young men and old.

America is a fruitful country, and we raise large crops of wheat and corn and oats, but the largest crop we raise in this country is the crop of drunkards. With sickle made out of the sharp edges of the broken bottles and the demonium they are cut down, and there are whole swathes of them, whole wineries of them, and it takes all the hospitals and penitentiaries and graveyards and cemeteries to hold this harvest of hell. Some of you are going down under this evil, and the never dying worm of alcoholism has wound around you, and it is to be by next New Year's Day it will have another coil around you, and it will after a while put a coil around your tongue and a coil around your brain and a coil around your lung and a coil around your foot and a coil around your heart, and some day this never dying worm will with one spring tighten all the coils at once and it the last twist of that awful convulsion you will cry out, "God, my God!" and be gone. The greatest of the broken bottles in the tragedy of the human life is the tragedy of the human Tempest seeds staggering across the stage Stephano, the drunken butler; but across the stage of human life strong drink seeds kingly and queenly and princely natures staggering forward against the footlights of conscience and then stagger back into the darkness, till the world is impatient for their disappearance and human and diabolic voices join in hissing them off the stage.

Many also make a failure in the drama of life through indolence. They are always making calculations how little they can do for compensation they get. There are more lazy men, lawyers, doctors, merchants, artists and farmers than have ever been counted upon. The community is full of laggards and shirkers. I can tell it from the way they crawl along the streets, from their tardiness in meeting engagements, from the lethargy they seem to hang to the look when they lift it, to the hand when they point it out, to the words when they speak.

Two young men in a store. In the morning the one goes to his post the last of the night minute behind. The other is ten minutes before the time and has his hat and coat hung up, and is at his post waiting for duty. The one is ever and anon, in the afternoon, looking at his watch to see if it is not time to go to work. The other always has an hour after he might go to work, asked why, said he wanted to look over some entries he had made, to be sure he was right, or to put up some goods that had been left out of place. The one is very punctilious about doing work not only of doing but of doing it well. The other is glad to help the other clerks in their work.
The first will be a prolonged nothing, and he will be poorer at 60 than at 20. The other will be a merchant prince. Indolence is the cause of his failure, and it is the cause of many failures have ever imagined. People are too lazy to do what they can do, and want to undertake that which they cannot do. In the drama of life they don't want to be a common soldier, carrying a halberd, or a common sailor, or a common more attendant, and so long as they can they they shall be called to be a Macready, or a Murdoch, or a Siddons, or a Junius Brutus Booth. They say, "Give me the part of Timon of Athens, rather than that of Flavius, his stevenage." Let him be Cymbeline, the other rather than Flavius, the servant." After a while they, by some accident of prosperity or circumstances, enter in the place for which they have been waiting, and they find that they are not a merchant, he is going around asking his creditors to compromise for ten cents on the dollar.
Or, if a clergyman, he is making tirades against the world and so long as he is an attorney, by unskillful management he loses a case by which widows and orphans are robbed of their portion. Or, if a physician, he by malpractice gives his patient rapid transit from this world to the next, the clumsy surgeon of Charles II., King of Navarre, having sewed up the feeble limbs of the king in a sheet soaked in inflammable material, and having no knife to cut the thread, took a candle to burn off the thread and the bandages took fire and consumed the king. Our incompetent friend would have made a splendid horseman, but he wanted to be professor of anatomy in a university. He would have sold enough confectionery to have supported his family, but he wanted to have a career replete like the Havermayers. He could have mended shoes, but he wanted to mend the Constitution of the United States. Towards the end of life these people are out of patience, out of money, out of friends, out of everything.
They go to the poor house to keep out of it, by running in debt to all the grocery and drygoods stores that will trust them. People begin to wonder when the curtain will drop on the scene.
After a while, leaving nothing but their com-piments to pay doctor, undertaker and Gabriel Grubb, the grave-digger, they disappear. Extinct!

Hissed off the stage.

Others fail in the drama of life through demonstrated selfishness. They make all the river, empty into the sea, all the road of emolument and honor off their brow. They gather all the plumes of honor off their brow. They keep no one, encourage no one, rescue no one. "How big a pile of money can I get?" and "How much of the world can I absorb?" are the chief questions.
They feel about the common people as the Turks feel about the Armenians, or common soldiers, considering them of no use except to fill up the ditches with their dead bodies while the other troops walked over them to take the fort. After a while this pride of worldly success is a hard The only interest selfishness has in his illness is the effect that his possible decease may have on the money market. After a while he dies. Great newspaper capitals announce how he started

In the Country Lawyer's Office.

N. Y. S. S.

We wanted justice. You could see that in the eyes of the law. He didn't want a little bit of justice weighed out in a man's hand and done up in a bag, but he wanted justice in the eyes of the law, and he wanted it in the eyes of the law, and he wanted it in the eyes of the law, and he wanted it in the eyes of the law, and he wanted it in the eyes of the law, and he wanted it
